HIT hosts classic ski movie screening

By RICHARD JENKINS
rjenkins@yourdailyglobe.com

IRONWOOD — The height of '80s ski fashion was on display at the Historic Ironwood Theatre Saturday as the theatre showed a re-release of Greg Stump's "The Blizzard of Aahhh's."

A play on "The Wizard of Oz," the title refers to an audience's reactions to the scenes on screen.

"Not everyone jumps off cliffs in this movie but everyone has a story," the narrator said.

Stump's film 30 years ago wasn't the first ski movie made, but organizers of Saturday's screening said it changed the genre.

"This was a turning point in the ski industry ... Before this movie came out it was all free-style stuff, mogul stuff, deep powder skiing — pretty skiing," said theatre board member Dan Tregembo. "These guys came in and they were doing stuff that was illegal, out-of-bounds."

This theme of the film's stars chasing thrills on mountains and off-limit areas of ski resorts comes up repeatedly in the film, as the protagonists bemoan the fact lawsuits and regulations have forced ski hills to prevent everyone from skiing these dangerous routes because some overestimated their skills and got hurt.

The film follows the skiers around America, before they head to the relative freedom of the mountains of Europe.

While Saturday's screening was at least partially inspired by the success of the Warren Miller screenings, Tregembo said Saturday's screening was a theatre event rather than a fundraiser for the ski team.

The film is part of a new effort by the theatre, according to Tregembo, to have a series of events targeting specific sports and hobbies.

"They do this with snowmobiling, mountain biking, fly fishing if you wanted to," he said. "We plan to do this with other (sports)."

He was pleased with how the first event went.

"This is what we expected," Tregembo said, noting there were a couple other events in town Saturday night that may have impacted turnout.

SAXON, Wis. — Residents interested in learning more about maple syrup had a chance to learn more about the process of tapping maple trees and making syrup at a pair of classes this weekend.

In the morning, a group gathered in the town of Saxon to hear from Andy Rowe, of Many Maples Sugar Bush.

Rowe talked about the process for tapping sugar maples and showed the group the various tools needed to collect sap from the trees. He also demonstrated how to tap a tree.

While drilling the hole to put the tap in, Rowe told those in attendance that it was important to avoid revving the drill or stopping it prior to pulling the bit out of the tree.

He explained this is to keep the hole as clean as possible to prevent micro-tears around the edges that sap can leak through.

He also emphasized trying to keep the equipment clean, saying that some major producers only use taps one time before throwing them away.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters raises funds, celebrates

By STEVE NEWMAN

IRONWOOD — Saturday, groups of bowlers gathered at Larry's Lucky Strikes in Ironwood to raise funds for and celebrate the work of the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program in the area. In addition to bowling, there were prize drawings and contests, food and fun and a 50/50 raffle.

According to Gogebic Range area program coordinator Amber Renaud, those raising funds sought a donation per bowler. In addition, those who are mentors also came and bowled and joined in the fun.

The program matches an older high school student — usually a junior — with a third grader.

Among the bowlers was a group of young men on the L.L. Wright High School varsity boys' basketball team, all of whom are or have been mentors. The mentors are assigned at the start of the school year and get opportunities during school time to spend time with their young person. According to Maggie Munch, program director for the western U.P., there are about 65 mentor matches locally between older and younger students.

According to junior Tommy Lundin, he has seen changes in the young person he mentors over the school year. "He has more of a comfort level around his classmates, and has been helped to engage with others better," he said.

Junior Sawyer Stengard is a mentor to two different kids. "I love it," he said. He has sometimes been able to help kids with homework in addition to helping with problems with other kids, "especially around Valentine's Day," he said.

Matt Agee was acting as the master of ceremonies to help to keep the fun coming and the tempo high throughout the event. He was happy to "volunteer his time for a good cause." There were giveaways and games where bowlers could win prizes every few minutes. As a result, the teams raising funds also have a good time.

One of the teams, a group from Aspirus Hospital calling themselves the "Aspirus Grandkids," Melissa Hillier, Cheryl Taivalmaa and Sue Kaffine, talked about their passion for the event. Hillier stated the event was important to her because it is "all about the kids." Taivalmaa stated the event has a "good core group and good times together."

Kaffine is a top fund raiser for the event, even raising funds from people out of the area. She said the

Wakefield council to swear in new city manager tonight

By P.J. GLISSON
news@yourdailyglobe.com

WAKEFIELD — A shift in power will occur after tonight's meeting of the Wakefield city council as current city manager Richard Brackney turns over the reins to his successor, Robert Brown, Jr.

At a special meeting on Jan. 23, council members voted to offer the job to Brown, 36, of Belding, Mich., and he has been

his responsibilities two months early. Brown's first day as city manager will be Tuesday.

Brown, whose wife and children will move here after the school year ends, told the Globe Friday morning that his first priority will be to get "updates on all the projects."

On Friday afternoon by phone, Brackney said the past week working with Brown went "very well."

The current city manager added of his successor, "I think he's got a good handle on what's going on. He seems to be a very intelligent man."

Brackney said Brown shouldn't have any trouble moving forward and added that council members may ease the transition even more by scheduling a dedicated work session with the new manager to discuss "what their concepts are."

In relation to his retirement starting earlier than anticipated, Brackney said, "I've got a big smile on my face. I'm looking forward to this."

In a work session last Thursday, council members discussed the following two issues of transition, which will be addressed formally at tonight's meeting:

—The council will vote to adopt Resolution No. 2019-250 to appoint Brown to his position, effective Feb. 26, 2019.

—The council will vote to address Brackney's exit in accordance with the following statement: "The benefit package for Richard Brackney will be active until the end of his contract May 24, 2019 and will be paid out at that time. He will receive regular pay-event was important to her because “the money stays here.” The funds raised support local operations, and she said that local people are “very generous.” The group from Aspirus has been working together for many years, and they have a “good team with lots of support.”

In addition to the school mentors, a group of Gogebic Community College students who are being mentored came to have fun and take part. Taylor Goard, a freshman from Ontonagon, said that she appreciates having a mentor and is a mentor in training for next year. Mentors have helped with some of the adjustments of “living on your own,” she said.

Evers' higher education budget would continue tuition freeze

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — People who entered the country illegally could pay in-state tuition, a long-running tuition freeze would continue for another two years and institutions would receive an additional $150 million under Democratic Gov. Tony Evers' executive budget proposal for the University of Wisconsin System.

Evers is scheduled to release his two-year spending plan on Thursday. His administration gave The Associated Press a broad preview of his plans for the system over the weekend.

The governor said during his race against then-Republican Gov. Scott Walker last year that he wanted students who were children when their parents brought them into the U.S. without legal permission to pay in-state tuition rates, a popular Democratic talking point. The budget proposal appears to go further. According to the administration's outline of the plan, any Wisconsin resident who entered the country without legal permission would pay in-state tuition at both UW System and Wisconsin Technical College System schools.

The plan is certain to draw criticism from Republican lawmakers. Walker criticized Evers over the idea, saying Evers wanted “special treatment for illegals.” But Evers' administration said in the outline that 21 other states as well as the District of Columbia provide in-state tuition for “undocumented students.”

Evers also promised on the campaign trail that he would continue a freeze on in-state undergraduate tuition. The freeze has been in place since 2013; Republicans imposed it after learning the system was building huge reserves while raising tuition year after year.

The freeze has been a perennial sore spot for UW officials. Walker made things even tougher for them when he slashed $250 million from the system's 2015-17 budget.

Ja Rule taking heat on social media after NBA halftime show

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rapper Ja Rule is taking heat on social media after problems with his halftime show during Saturday's Timberwolves-Bucks game.

Videos posted online show Ja Rule had sound problems at the beginning of his performance. At one point he said, “Are we ready?” then said, “I guess not,” before his music eventually started.

Another video shows Bucks star Giannis Antetokounmpo taking warmup shots while Ja Rule is still performing.

Ja Rule responded to critics on Twitter, saying his sound “didn't come on when it was supposed to” but he “rocked.” When the Timberwolves' official Twitter account mocked Ja Rule, he responded by cursing the team, saying, “You won't win a championship for the next 30 years.”

Ja Rule has been the subject of ridicule for his role in the failed Fyre Festival in the Bahamas. He recently told TMZ that he plans to create another music festival.

As importance keeping things clean is, Rowe said detergent should be avoided at all cost as it leaves a residue that transfers to the syrup and ruins it.

In the afternoon, a second class was held in Mercer for those in the southern part of the county.

Darrin Kimbler, the agriculture educator with Iron County's UW-Extension office and one of the organizers of the classes, was pleased with both classes.

A little over 40 people attended the two classes, according to Kimbler.

Attendees included everyone from those who wanted to start tapping syrup for the first time to people who looking for tips to improve their systems or who were considering starting commercial operations.

“I thought both classes were excellent,” Kimbler said.

Anyone with questions about maple syrup production can contact Kimbler at 715-561-2695.

Brown has a Bachelor of Arts Degree in political science with a concentration in campaign leadership from Southern New Hampshire University.

His previous work was with the three-county Fred Meijer River Valley Trail in Belding. He also engaged in political campaign organizing.

Belding is in Ionia County and is about 100 miles west of Flint. Brown was the only city manager applicant from Michigan.

Tonight's city council meeting will start at 5:30 p.m. in the council room of the municipal building.
